ABOUT

AEGIS Journal of International Relations is a bi-annual journal which publishes articles on issues, events and discourses in International Relations on the bases of the broadening scope in the discipline. As the world is moving toward one borderless village due to the globalization which replaced the Cold War in 1989, the nature and characteristics of IR is dramatically changing and so has been the academic scope of the discipline. Among the new characteristics of the IR in the globalization are the interconnected of local and global, both events and issues, and the prominent important of international organization, which has been growing in numbers, membership and roles.

This journal also committed to facilitate and held to publish all and any academic work of IR Scholars from different background – universities students, lecturers, researchers, diplomats, journalists, businessmen, and other professionals interested in and already working in the field which is connected to IR. Concerning the work of the students, we do not only publish thesis and other academic writings of students of the President University but also students of IR and related disciplines from other universities.

As part of this commitment, we invite articles on the basis of academic scopes, not in the limited thematic issues, for each of our publication.
